

Sarah Speight

Sarah Speight is a Doctoral student in the Department of Geography, Environment, and Geomatics at the University of Ottawa. She is also a member of the Criminalization and Punishment Education Project, which is a University of Ottawa and Carleton University student-faculty initiative that aims to develop collaborative criminological research projects, as well as plan and carry-out related public education initiatives. She is also a coordinator at the Jail Accountability and Information Line, a hotline serving people incarcerated at the Ottawa-Carleton Detention Centre. Sarah has been doing prisoner justice-related organizing since 2014. Her research examines the impacts associated with spatial conditions of release from custody.
